

Helping Southern Producers Reduce Risks Through New Internet-based Services

A Project Funded by USDA Risk Management Agency

Partners:

Southern Sustainable Agriculture Working Group (SSAWG)
National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT), Fayetteville, AR

Advisory Team:

Rodale Institute, Kutztown, PA
Heifer International, Southeast Program, Gainesville, FL
Florida Organic Growers, Gainesville, FL
Arkansas Land and Farm Development Corporation, Brinkley, AR
Kentucky State University, Small Farmer Program, Frankfort, KY
Rural Coalition, Washington, DC

March 2005

PART 1

Resources for Learning and Connecting With Other Producers and Markets

- For information please call NCAT Agriculture Specialists at NCAT (toll free) 1-866-442-6085.
- Contributors include Teresa Maurer, NCAT Program Manager, and Majid Qureshi, Computing Services Intern.

Table of Contents

PART 1

LEVEL ONE

INTRODUCTION TO USING THE INTERNET FOR FARM MARKETING

Element 1 Why Use the Internet for Farm Marketing?

Introduction

Pros

Cons

Developing a Marketing Plan:

What to accomplish by being on the Internet?

Basic Elements You Need

How Producers Are Using the Internet for Farm Marketing:

- Simple e-mail Marketing Example
- Email Newsletter Marketing Example
- Third-Party Web Site Listing Examples
- Simple Farm Web Site Examples
- Complex Farm Web Site Example with On-line Ordering and Payment Examples

Element 2 The Basics: Using Your Computer and Technical Support

Internet Service Providers (ISP)

Four Ways to Connect to the Internet

Element 3 E-mail (Electronic-mail) Marketing

E-mail Newsletters

Tips to Create Newsletters That Work

(Presentation by Angie Eckert)

Element 3 (cont'd) Etiquette

Viruses

Domain Names

Mailing List Servers (LISTSERVs)

Newsgroups

Photos

Element 4 Finding Information on the Web to Use in Marketing

What Producers Find on the Internet:

Useful Sites for Marketing Information

Marketing on the Internet – More Information

Using Search Engines

Element 5 Evaluating the Quality of Information on the Internet

Element 6 Listing Your Farm on a Third-Party Site

LEVEL TWO

YOUR OWN WEB SITE:

MORE ADVANCED USES OF THE INTERNET FOR FARM MARKETING

Element 1 More on Domain Names

Element 2 Developing Your Own Farm Web Site

Free Web Hosts

Commercial Web Hosts

Considerations for Choosing a Commercial Web Host

Element 3 How to Get Your Web Site Seen

Using Tags to Help Search Engines Find Your Site

- <TITLE> Tags
- <META> Tags

Body Text

Registering Your Site with Search Engines

Element 4 Using Web Statistics to Evaluate Your Web Site

Element 5 On-line Transactions

So you want to conduct on-line transactions-- is this feasible?

Storefronts

PART 2

IN-DEPTH TECHNICAL PRESENTATION FOR MORE INFORMATION

Web Site Development for Farms, by Debbie Roos

North Carolina Cooperative Extension, Chatham County Center

ATTRA is the national sustainable agriculture information service operated by the National Center for Appropriate Technology, through a grant from the Rural Business-Cooperative Service, U.S.

Department of Agriculture. These organizations do not recommend or endorse products, companies, or individuals. NCAT has offices in Fayetteville, Arkansas, Butte, Montana, and Davis, California.

